

Dr Nigel Oseland

Nigel is a workplace strategist, change manager, environmental psychologist and author with 10 years research and 15 years consulting experience. He helps occupiers redefine their workstyle to create space-efficient and cost-effective workplaces that enhance business performance.

Nigel specialises in strategic briefing and alternative working; he creates workplaces that improve collaboration, enhance creativity, respond to new organisational structures, and deliver maximum value. Through his career at DEGW, AMA Alexi Marmot Associates, Swanke Hayden Connell Architects and Johnson Controls, Nigel has worked with many corporate and public sector organisations developing their workplace strategies, standards and processes.

Nigel began his career at the BRE researching the impact of the built environment on staff behaviour and performance, before applying his knowledge to workplace design. His government research informed European and International standards.

Nigel presents regularly at international conferences and organises the annual Workplace Trends conference. He authored Improving Office Productivity: A Practical Guide for Facilities and Business Managers, he was the lead author of the BCO Guide to Post-Occupancy Evaluation, and more recently he co-authored the BCO report on Making Flexible Working Work.
